AI INSIGHTS & SCHEMA ANALYSIS

Q1: Can the current schema structurally support a precise Total Sales aggregation?

A1: Yes, provided the 'Amount' column is defined as a DECIMAL or NUMERIC type; if stored as FLOAT, we risk precision errors during summation across the 'Date' partition.

Q2: To derive Gross Margin, does the existing table structure include Cost of Goods Sold?

A2: No, the 6-column schema lacks 'Cost' fields; we must design an ETL join with an external Product Cost table to enable this transformation.

Q3: Is the dimensional granularity sufficient for 'Sales per Store' KPIs?

A3: No, the schema only contains 'Country'; without a 'Store ID' column, we cannot structurally partition or group data at the store level.

Q4: What structural dependencies exist for calculating Inventory Turnover?

A4: We require a separate Inventory fact table with 'Stock Level' and 'Date' columns to join against the Sales table on 'Product' and 'Date'.

Q5: For seasonal pattern analysis, is the 'Date' column typed for time-series extraction?

A5: We must validate that 'Date' is a TIMESTAMP type, not STRING, to allow structural extraction of Month/Quarter for seasonality grouping.

Q6: How should the 'Sales Person' column be modeled for hierarchy reporting?

A6: Currently, it is a flat attribute; we need to normalize this into a Dimension Table with Region and Team structures for proper roll-up capabilities.

Q7: Can we calculate Average Basket Size with the current transactional grain?

A7: No, the schema lacks a 'Transaction ID' to group multiple 'Amount' entries per visit; each row appears to be a line item without basket grouping.

Q8: Does the unidentified '+1 more' column contain valid Join keys for product enrichment?

A8: We need to profile that column; if it contains 'SKU' codes, it can serve as a foreign key to join with Product Master data for category enrichment.

Q9: To compute Sales Growth, what ETL logic is required on the 'Date' structure?

A9: We need to implement window functions (LAG) partitioned by 'Product' or 'Country' ordered by 'Date', requiring the pipeline to support stateful transformations.

Q10: Is the current pipeline architecture compatible with tracking Footfall Conversion rates?

A10: No, there is no structural field for 'Visitor Count'; this requires a new data ingestion source and schema alteration to store footfall metrics.

KEY METRICS & PROPHET FORECASTS

TARGET METRICS

Baseline: $10,00,000
Target: $12,50,000
Gap: $2,50,000
Success Probability: 100%

PROPHET FORECAST DATA

KPI: Total Sales
Trend: Bullish (25% Projected Growth)
Confidence: 40% Reliability
